ENGLAND WILL STEP ASIDE, PERMITTING FRANCE TO PUNISH

Paris, April 14.—Great Britain, with its objections to the Ruhr occupation, is to be left outside the sentence a little longer while France and Belgium apply the sword and bring their vengeance to a successful and profitable conclusion.

This is the decision reached by the League of Nations conference terminated shortly after noon today and Franco-Belgian officials reaffirm they will not even take the Ruhr except in such ratio as Germany fulfills the obligation of the Versailles treaty.

NOTHING NEW ABOUT KNOW ON APRIL FIFTH

Just about the time we thought we were seeing something new in the weather line his morning Johnathon Ogden dropped into the office to tell us that in 1881 or just 38 years ago, on April 17th, we had just such a day as this. At that time the cold spell hung on for three weeks, not ending until May 11. No gardens were made until the middle of May.

SNOW PUTS TROUT FISHING OUT OF BUSINESS MONDAY

Again is it our duty to arise in our place and remark that indeed is this the winter of our discontent. Here we were with a can chock full of wriggling angleworms, the fishing pole all shiny with new varnish and the knapsack packed with all you can get now, ready for a foray into the mountains in order that we might be able to slip quietly to the banks of our favorite trout stream early Monday morning and attempt to beguile form his hiding places the wary speckled beauty lucky enough to escape his natural enemies during the long continued drought and consequent low water of last summer and fall, when lo! and behold, upon arising this morning we find two inches of snow upon the ground with the snowflakes continuing to fall in sheets.

Woe is me and mine fisherman friends the countryside over. Hoping for at least a crumb of comfort we hasten to the telephone and inquire of our good friend Bearick at Kennedy Park Game Reserve, what of the weather out upon his mountain nearby where the streams head upon which we usually try our skill. Imagine our consternation, dismay, etc., when Bearick informs us that at the mountain top they had a total of four inches of snow at 10 o'clock this morning and from the way it was coming down in clouds he believed it would reach 10 inches on the level by noon.

Being shy a fish hound and not having a snow shovel we hereby renounce all thought of going fishing on opening day and will thus break a record of twenty years standing. Draw this pecky weather man and the weather he is making.

TWISTY MARITAL PROBLEM IS PUT UP TO JUDGE; WOMAN SAYS SHE MARRIED TWINS; SHE CANNOT TELL THEM APART

Innsbruck, Germany, April 14.—A plot in matrimony, which would rival the most risqué of French farces, was put before the magistrate here today for solution.

Wealthy Frau Marie Telder, aged twenty-four complained that she married one man and now has good reason to believe that she is living with his twin.

"I would like your Honor to determine whether I married one man or two, who are identical in appearance," she said. Frau Telder explained that the civil and religious ceremonies

DECLARE GHOSTLY FORM FLITS THRU SHAWVILLE CHURCH

The little village of Shawville, located seven miles down the river from Clearfield, is in the throes of a real ghost scare. The ghost or "haunt" is said to frequent the Methodist church building, several school girls who sometimes visited the church during recess period and at the noon hour claiming to have seen an "honest to goodness" ghost on several occasions. According to these girls the ghost or spectre, which takes the form of a woman, has been seen to rise from behind the pulpit and apparently float through the air about the church. Their story of the ghost has caused quite a commotion in the neighborhood and several of the bravest young men of the village have visited the church on several occasions for the purpose of laying for the ghost, but thus far their efforts have proved unavailing as the unearthly visitor failed to appear to them.

Physical Director Oberdyck will be demonstrating. Each member of the class should bring at least one friend.

MAJOR LYNN ADAMS, SUPERINTENDENT OF STATE POLICE, TELLS COMMONS OF WORK OF "PENNSYLVANIA'S FINEST"

Two Fisted Head of Pennsylvania State Police Makes Fine Impression On Hundred Men Assembled; Devoted to Ridding State of Liquor

POINTS TO THE DUTY OF THE CITIZENS

Major Adams, head of "Pennsylvania's Finest," the State Constabulary, experiences in dealing with liquor law violators and urged the men of the Common Club of Trinity Methodist church, which meeting was held in the Sunday school room of the church. Members of the club and their guests to the number of one hundred men were present to hear the distinguished speaker and all were not only pleased with his talk but came away filled with the idea that the right man is at the head of this justly famous organization, and, thanks to Major Adams' detailing of the character, training and make up of the men under his command, possessed a better knowledge and appreciation of the state police organization and membership as a whole.

President Sam L. Warner presided over the meeting in his usual inimitable style and kept things on the move all the while. After the introduction of guests President Warner announced a pair of out-of-the-ordinary guests in the persons of Messrs. Gallagher and Shean, who are known to fame because of a recent court hearing in which the stamp of just ordinary "ham actors" was placed upon them legally and officially by the judge who had them perform in his court room. However the local pair were Harder and Stauffer than the originals and they made a real and prolonged hit with their really clever "pokes" at the more important persons there assembled. Gallagher and Shean were a real treat.

Alex Black, a visitor to the club, whusled "Annie Laurie" and another wee Scotch ballad we didn't ken the name of in the manner which has earned for him the title of the "Scotch Canary Bird" of the Fourth Ward. At this point President Warner stated that inasmuch as Major Adams would be required to drive across the mountain to Tyrone to catch a train for Harrisburg, he proposed to have him address the meeting and thereupon introduced the distinguished speaker.

Major Adams is a forceful, convincing speaker and opened his remarks by saying he knew his audience was expecting to hear a "dry speech," and he didn't propose to disappoint them. He then referred to Friday, 13th, and said 13 was his hoodoo. He noticed the American flag adorning the room, had thirteen stripes in it, and he didn't like that. He also noticed there were more red than white stripes in that flag and he not only didn't like that but proposed to tear one out, asking his audience if they would join him in doing that. Upon receiving no response to his request for help Major Adams said he presented the matter in this way because that was the way with the bootlegger and the wets generally, they wanted to tear the 18th Amendment out of the Constitution—but they would never get it.

Major Adams was given a great hand at the close of his remarks, the assemblage giving him a ringing vote of appreciation.

The meeting closed with the illustrated lecture on clay and clay products by Mr. Hubbard. The dinner was served by the ladies of the church and was in thorough keeping with the fine character of the meeting throughout.

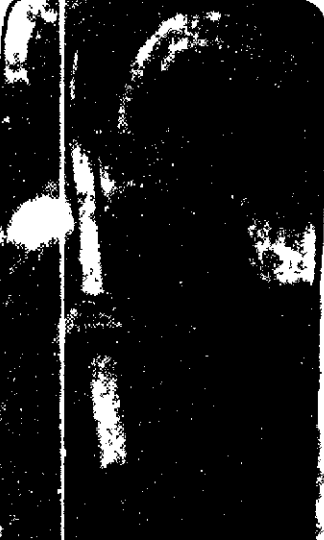

DEER BREAKS NECK ATTEMPTING TO HURDLE STATE NURSERY FENCE

A little buck deer went foraging in Billy Dague's state nursery out near Kennedy Park Game Reserve one day last week and failing to remember where he got through the fence attempted to jump over the high wire fence surrounding the nursery. He failed to scale the fence but did succeed in breaking his neck.

Game Keeper Bearick was called to look after the dead buck, which weighed about 75 pounds. He charged Billy with running his Ford into the deer on the road and then tossing the victim over into the nursery, but Billy was able to prove an alibi by the tracks in the soil inside the fence.

A choir boy (upper left) was dismissed.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. G.

Those of us of Democratic leanings, and we are becoming plentier in the land daily, appear to want to be overdoing it a little in charging every price raise on the necessities of life to the tariff. The tariff may have something to do with it, but the little old middleman and money-hungry retailer must not be allowed to walk a tireless out of the picture.

A financial writer in defending the tariff from a price inflation charge says: If the tariff is to blame for the heat in prices on "protected" articles, then the articles on the free list, unaffected by the tariff, ought to show no increase in prices, or, in any event, only moderate increases.

This recent depression touched bottom at the end of 1921. The general level of prices in December 1921 was 14. That level had risen to 168 on Jan. 1, 1923. Thus the average increase in commodity prices was exactly 20 per cent.

Raw silk is on the free list. From December, 1921, to the first week in April, raw silk increased from $7.56 per pound to $9.15 per pound, an increase of 21.6 per cent.

Rubber is on the free list. In the period a question it increased from 24 cents to 30.25 cents per pound, an increase of 26 per cent.

Ten is on the free list. In this year and a quarter, it rose from 29 cents to 45 cents per pound, an increase of 55.2 per cent.

Coffee is on the free list. It increased in price from 9.15 cents to 11.25 cents per pound, an increase of 23 per cent.

Copper is on the free list. It rose from 6.53 to 17.125 cents per cent.

Turpentine is on the free list. It rose from 80c to $1.49 per gallon, an increase on 100 per cent.

Tin is on the free list. Its price increased from $2.41 to 51c per pound, a rise of 57.3 per cent.

Brick is on the free list. It sold for 18.5c per pound in December, 1921, and it sold for 30c per pound in the first week of April. The rise was 63 per cent.

In other words, average prices have risen less rapidly than the price of each of these commodities, which are among the most important on the duty-free list. Therefore, it is very untrue to say that "there has been no advance in prices which could not be ascribed to the highest protective tariff this country has ever imposed."

The people of the United States have been patient and long-suffering in dealing with the beverage liquor traffic. They have tried every kind of regulation, taxation, restriction, local option, and the other known methods of dealing with the well-regulated evil. The history of the adoption of national prohibition is one of the finest illustrations of the ability of a self-governing people of methods of control over action to be met.

The Colonies from the earliest times tried in vain to solve the problem. From 1612, when the Colony of Massachusetts, after declaring that many are "disquipping themselves with drink," ordered that the governor's permit be necessary to sell liquor, for over a century there were few years in which laws and ordinances were not passed, tried for a time, and repealed that others might be passed, in the attempt to control that which never has been controllable—the liquor traffic. In 1664 the preamble of one of these early liquor laws sets forth that "notwithstanding the great care this court hath had and the laws made to suppress that swinish sin of drunkenness, yet persons addicted to the vice find out ways to deceive the law." Various forms of the license system were tried, but none curbed the growing evil.

The Whiskey Rebellion
The Revolutionary War brought forth an edict much like the order forbidding the sale of intoxicants to men in uniform during the recent World War. In Cambridge General Washington issued orders to the officers of the Continental Army to prevent so far as possible American soldiers from frequenting tippling houses. The Continental Congress on September 20, 1776, prohibited the sale of all kinds of liquors to soldiers by sutlers. Even then liquor was formally and officially recognized as an enemy to the Republic and its use a treason to the State.

Taxes and imposts upon distilled liquors, proposed by Hamilton, were adopted by Congress in 1791, the anticipated revenue being estimated by Hamilton at $826,000 annually. Amendment of this act to impose the tax upon distilleries resulted in the whiskey rebellion of 1793, when 13,000 soldiers had to be called out and $1,500,000—a sum larger than the three years' receipts from the liquor taxes—expended by the new Nation to curb the first open and avowed attempt to substitute the rule of advocates of personal liberty and liquor for the rule of the majority.

The fact that the action of State of Pennsylvania in calling question the authority of the Federal Government to thus control the liquor traffic encouraged the leaders of the insurrection is suggestive today when new rebellions against the Constitution are being advocated by men who for appetite or profit would demolish orderly government.

You Pay Three Costs
in the Purchase of Any
—Range—

Most folks when they come into a new home, after finding out for themselves why a new range is a better investment, they purchase a new range. They pay three costs:

1. Cost of the range.
2. Cost of fuel consumed during the life of its usefulness.
3. Cost of repairs.

OTHELLO and ROUND OAK
IRON-BUILT RANGES

Because of exclusive advantages, the OTHELLO and ROUND OAK, when these three costs are added for a period of as short as 10 or 12 years actually cost less than a cheap or medium priced range which cannot possibly render the same service or assure the same degree of satisfaction in its possession.

The reason why is that the saving in fuel and the absence of repairs in time actually pays for the Range.

May we ask a very serious question? If you must pay the three costs anyway, why not select the one whose final cost is least, particularly when the satisfaction and pride of possession throughout the years of usefulness is worth more to you than the money. Let us demonstrate each and every one of these desirable features.

Political Paragraphs
ODELL HAUSER'S COLUMN

Little matter of taxation produced the excitement that had been seen at the time of the last assembly. The original figures of the budget, Monday and the House closed. The matter was not yet settled. How can I say to our friends, and you so, and of all the words, the one that is none said more reliable by the follower of the amateur or professional. To the amateur, the still up with the professional.

In the present instance, it is not a difficult job to keep up with the professional, for they are not leading very rapidly. There was only one development in a week that amounts to very much. The development was a statement of the Governor Pinchot that the apparently been accepted by all as final.

The first and most recent tone of voice of the Governor was that as far as the matter of the new taxes, he was not going to do anything. But the Governor's tone was the same as the one that was the subject of his speech. And, of course, the last time and no—and more, it seems to think it is—then we get somewhere, not very far, but somewhere. And that is a lot these days.

There is the moral of the week. The assembly, as we now understand it, has to handle the taxation problem without any help from the Governor. There are signs that it did not do that, but it is not according to the first intention was to start around in circles, emitting an heartrending cries of distress. The week was practically devoted to that.

The reason thereof is that not only the House not know what to tax, it is not sure it knows how much it needs to raise. A dog may catch a success chasing his own tail, but if he has reason to doubt, he will not be his caudal appendage. The problem is decidedly complicated. Add to it is with the Assembly. Far from being its only problem, the question of how much money must be raised, which must be settled first.

Chairman Harer of the appropriations committee and certain of his members have nuzzled their flag to the ground on the assertion that something like $1,200,000 is needed to run the business of the state for the next two years.

But the administration says that the Governor Pinchot and Dr. Harer can get the good ship of wealth over her two year voyage by feeding only some $90,000.

Nothing is ever supposed to happen at Thursday meetings of the House. The few members there are supposed to sleep peacefully and in their slumber advance bills on the calendar so as to be ready for next week.

There sent the Ludlow of Montgomery county is the man who should be added to the list of notable men in particular, he got up and said he wanted to speak on a question of personal privilege. Getting the floor, he proceeded to lay out and embalm the ways and means committee for not having presented to the legislative body an orderly and logical plan of taxation.

This was the signal to throw out the life line. Everybody who had anything to say on the subject immediately began to try to say it. And before they were through, considerable had been said.

Just how one is to divide the various schools of thought, present proposition is somewhat at a loss to say. But there are several schools of thought and so we might as well take this opportunity to do what we can toward elucidating them, a for our own minds. And we needn't be afraid of what we say, either because there is always one consolation in this matter: no one knows any more about it than anyone else.

Starting with Representative Ludlow himself, I should say that he represented the administration school of thought. He denied, when taxed with it, that he was by arrangement speaking the mind of the Governor, and that was probably literally true. Nevertheless, what he said was in the main what constituted the administration's viewpoint, namely, "why doesn't the House get busy and do something about this without bothering us?"

The peculiar part of that, however, is that in what he said Mr. Ludlow was virtually attacking Representative Woner, chairman of the ways and means committee. And Mr. Woner has been recognized all along as a strong supporter of the administration. So it is apparent there is just a bit of confusion in the administration school of thought.

When Mr. Ogle arose to remark called for the manufacturers to submit to being taxed. He represents that by no means inconsiderable portion of the House which believes the need for new revenue should be met by repealing the exemption the manufacturing corporations enjoy from a tax on their capital stock valuation.

Early in this session I could—and in fact did—believe thoroughly that there was no way of escaping levying increased taxes in this session and that the whole trend of things was to make it a manufacturers' tax. But that viewpoint was based on the political situation that existed at that time.

As the readers of these paragraphs know by exclusive information brought out two weeks ago, a change has come over the spirit of the dream. The Grundy interests and their time foes of the Crow-Sprot-Baker have begun to get together. That considerably alters the prospects for the manufacturers' tax. I now look as though the project advocated by Mr. Ogle the other day in the House would have difficulty in materializing. In fact, my own inclination at this time is to believe there is only one thing likely to enact the manufacturers tax and that is the possibility that the Governor might advocate it, which possibility is not over light just now.

Still another viewpoint was that expressed by Representative Alexander, the doughty little man from Media. Alexander broke with the Governor on the dry bill and is pretty well "off" Mr. Pinchot at the moment. He constituted himself on Thursday as spokesman for the group which more or less openly criticizes Mr. Pinchot for his course in the taxation matter. This group chides His Excellency for "passing the buck" to the legislative body on taxation. It maintains Mr. Pinchot should have taken the leadership in working out the revenue question, and that his failure to do so has put that body in a false and disagreeable position, from which it is entitled to exonerate itself without consulting the Governor's interests. This group is rather intent on making trouble.

And there you have it. Next week ought to be interesting at Harrisburg. It will represent the working out of the conflict between these views. Beginning with Monday next, we shall see what the Assembly does after having finished with the pastime of running around in circles.

Wealth in the Mind.
It is the mind that makes us rich and happy, in what condition we are and money signifies no more to it than it does to the gods—Seneca.

Australia's Plague of Rabbits.

The Potato's Joy Ride to Market
$1 to $3

(National Crop Improvement Service)
HERE is a little picture that shows how one dollar's worth of potatoes becomes three dollars' worth in New York, Philadelphia or Boston.

The figures are computed by O. M. Kile, in an article in McClure's, says Dennis A. Merriman of the American Steel and Wire company. "Just to start you thinking, consider the joy ride to market, in 1920.

To the points farther east, the consumer cost is easily $3.00. The discrepancy is even worse on the 1922 crop, as the sacks, barrels and cost of handling are worth more than the potatoes on the farm, but the proportion of spread, between producer and consumer is the same or greater.

When some of these potatoes are served on dining cars or in first-class hotels, they have forgotten all about their humble beginning and the price per bushel depends on the size of the potatoes. A 60-pound potato, which costs $1 a bushel would cost the farmer 1 2/3 cents. If served at the moderate price of 25 cents, the spread is about 1427 per cent.

The consumer pays for bottled spring water, 25 cents a bottle at retail. The water itself costs practically nothing.

Thinking this in mind, what steps can be eliminated from the potato's joy ride?

LESSON FOR APRIL 15

JOSEPH, THE PRESERVER OF HIS PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 45:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Honor thy father
and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord
thy God giveth thee.—Exodus 20:12.
REFERENCE MATERIAL.—Joshua
24:22. Psalm 105:16-23; Hebrews 11:31-32.

PRIARY TOPIC—Joseph Forgiving
Brothers.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Joseph, the Forgiving
Brother.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Joseph as Son and Brother.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Inspiring Example of Joseph.

While the climax of the story is reached in Joseph's revelation to his brethren, yet his life should be briefly sketched in order to get the full force of this climax.

I. Loved by His Father; Hated by His Brethren (Genesis 37). The betrayal of the father's partiality increased his brethren's hatred for him. His dreams were prophecies of God's dealing with them.

II. Sold into Slavery (Genesis 37). So intensely did they hate him that they proposed to kill him. This murderous purpose was turned aside by the proposition to sell him into slavery. They sold him to merchantmen who were going down into Egypt and in turn they sold him as a slave.

III. Cast into Prison (Genesis 39). While serving as a slave he was falsely accused and sent to prison. Joseph's character had so impressed Potiphar that he doubted his wife's charges against him. If he had believed her he would have put this Hebrew slave to death.

IV. Made Prime Minister (Genesis 41). Though falsely accused and imprisoned the hand of the Lord was upon him that he was soon exalted to the throne of Pharaoh.

V. His Dealing With His Brethren (Genesis 42-44). He dealt barly with them, desiring to test their characters before revealing himself to them.

VI. Joseph Reveals Himself to His Brethren (Genesis 45:1-15).

1. Alone With His Brethren (vv. 1-2). When his pent-up emotions could no longer be restrained he ordered all the men to withdraw. Here alone with his brethren he made himself known to them. There are some emotions too sacred to disclose in the presence of un sympathetic men.

2. Conscience Smitten Brethren (v. 3). When Joseph disclosed his identity they stood condemned in his presence. They were smitten with a guilty conscience. A score of years before they had put him into a pit to die, but later lifted him out and sold him into slavery. Now they are before him with reversed positions. They are at his mercy. Some day every man shall face his sin unless they be canceled in the blood of Jesus.

3. Divine Providence Interpreted (vv. 4-5). (1) His gracious invitation (v. 4). "Come near, I am your brother." How like the Savior. He is saying unto sinners who have wronged him, "Come near, I am your brother." (2) "He no grieved" (v. 5). He sought by these words to allay the distress in which his brethren were. Jesus is saying the same kind words to repentant sinners today. (3) "God sent me to preserve life" (v. 5-8). God turned the wicked thoughts of these brethren to good. God is today making the wrath of man to praise him. All that Satan can do but furthers God's purposes. The very wicked thoughts of these brethren in attempting to destroy Joseph were turned to the preservation of their lives.

4. Joseph's Message to His Father (vv. 9-15). (1) "God hath made me Lord of Egypt" (v. 9). He made them hasten to his father with the assurance that God had elevated him to a place of lordship in Egypt. (2) Urgent invitation (vv. 9-10). His father is invited to come, bringing his children, grandchildren and flocks. This must have been a great and joyful surprise to Jacob, when famine and death were plaguing him. (3) Promise of nourishment during famine (v. 11). Joseph did not allow his prosperity to make him selfish. His character stood the test of prosperity. (4) Tell father of all my glory in Egypt (v. 12). This was not boasting but an effort to convince his father of his ability to care for him.

5. Joseph's Forgiving Love (vv. 14-15). Joseph weeping upon the neck of his brethren is a most touching scene. There was entire forgiveness; there was full reconciliation. This transcendent scene causes Joseph's character to shine forth in its true glory.

As If It Were Plato.
Great is he who enjoys his earthly life as if it were Plato, and not less great is the man to whom all his life is no more than a preparation.—Seneca

Consider Others.
The excessive pleasure we feel in talking of ourselves, ought to make us apprehensive that we afford little to our hearers.—Rochefoucauld.

The All-Servicing Spirit.
The spirit of God is not imprisoned in the Bible nor limited to it.

THE ODD ONE OF THE FAMILY!

Announcing Our Co-Operation in the New Ford Weekly Purchase Plan

Following out our policy of extending the facilities of this bank in whatever way we can to serve the public, we have arranged to give our co-operation to the new Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.

We realize what the automobile means to the average family in bringing them greater enjoyment of life, and believe our action in helping those who desire to become Ford owners will be appreciated by many families who can now realize that ambition through the new Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.

Under this plan, you can begin with an initial deposit as low as $5.00. Then select the type of Ford you want—Touring Car, Runabout, Coupe, Sedan, etc.—and arrange to make weekly deposits on which interest will be computed at our regular savings rate.

Come in and let us explain the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan to you, or, if you wish, go to the nearest Ford Dealer for further details.

Start today, and before you realize it you will be driving your own car.

Clearfield National Bank
CLEARFIELD, PA.

Ford THE UNIVERSAL CAR ANNOUNCEMENT of Interest to MILLIONS of FAMILIES "I will build a car for the multitude" Said Henry Ford in 1903—Read how the fulfillment of that prophecy is now made possible through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan

For many years it has been Henry Ford's personal ambition to make the Ford the universal family car—to put it within the reach of the millions of people who have never been privileged to enjoy the benefits of motor car owners.

During the past fifteen years over 7,500,000 Ford cars have been placed in the hands of retail customers—more than a million and a half of them within the past twelve months—and yet there are still millions of families who are hopefully looking forward to the day when they can own a Ford. And now the way is open.

Under the terms of this plan you can select your Ford Car, set aside a small amount each week and you will be surprised how soon you will own it. In the meantime your money will be safely deposited to your credit in one of the local banks where it will draw interest.

Think it over. Five dollars will start an account. The whole family can participate in it—father, mother, brothers and sisters each doing a little.

Why not start today. Stop in and talk it over with your local Ford dealer. He will be glad to fully explain the details of the plan and help you get started toward the ownership of a Ford car.

THE GREAT ELUSION

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Copyright, 1922, by E. Phillips Oppenheim

Arrgt. NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Verdita begins between Michael Savins, noted criminal, and

SIR NORMAN GREYER once of Scotland Yard, when Sayer's beautiful housemaid JANET saves him from Sir Norman's clutches.

Michael, who was choosing a club, just glanced up at me for a moment, and I felt as though I had said something sacrilegious.

"We don't play games that way," he rejoined quietly. "I am afraid this is going to be rather a forlorn hope, though."

He took a nibble, and against the wind he was only able to get about halfway to the green. This time, however, his ball was lying well.

"I play the odd," he murmured as he selected a running-up stroke. We waited breathlessly for the shot.

Norman's caddy and Michael's caddy were in love. Michael's caddy was a girl named Janet, who was a housemaid at the house where Michael was staying.

Now go on with story Janet Continues:

So the match started. The first hole was halved in four, and from then onward commenced a struggle which I can hardly think of, even now, without a shiver of excitement.

Neither was over more than two up; but toward the sixteenth hole, I began to realize that another factor besides skill was at work.

Norman topped his second shot but jumped the bunker and lay upon the green. Michael carried a mauling shot, but plucked upon a moving machine and came back to an almost unplayable place in the long grass. He lost the hole.

Norman, who was as nearly nervous as I have ever seen him, muttered something about bad luck, but his adversary only shrugged his shoulders.

At the seventeenth hole Norman drove fairly well but was still sixty yards short of the green. It was the old Michael who took his stand afterward on the tee, hard and dogged. I saw his teeth gleam for a moment, and the whitening of the flesh around his knuckles as he gripped his club fiercely.

He hit the most wonderful drive I have ever seen, long and low and straight, carried on and on, while we watched it breathlessly. Finally it ran onto the green and ended within a couple of club-lengths of the hole. I gave a little gasp of relief, for from the first I had prayed that my husband might lose.

But I had reckoned without that unseen force, Norman topped his mauling shot, which bumped along the green onto the green, passed Michael's ball, and to my horror, dropped into the hole. Even Norman himself seemed to have no words. He stood looking at the spot where his ball had disappeared, his face averted from his opponent.

Michael made no remark. He studied his putt long and carefully, hit it with a musical little click, and we all watched it run straight for the hole. At the last moment some trifling irregularity of surface seemed to deflect it; it caught the corner of the hole, swung round inside and came out again. It rested on the very edge, and we stood there waiting. Nothing, however, happened. Michael turned away, and I noticed that I saw a little quiver upon his lips.

At the eighteenth, a strong wind was against them. Norman, pulling a little, escaped the bunkers; but Michael, hitting a far better ball, carried them with a few yards to spare. Norman played a fine second and reached the green four or five yards from the hole.

When Michael reached his ball, I saw him stop and look at it. His servant gave an exclamation. It was lying where a huge clod of earth had been knocked away by some beginner and never replaced, without a blade of grass around it and on a downward slope. I looked across toward my husband.

TO LAWRENCE TOWNSHIP DEMOCRATS I hereby announce that I will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Supervisor of Lawrence Township at the coming Primary election. Thanking the voters for their help two years ago I again solicit their aid.

Curwensville's
Own Column

Miss Cooper and her sister came up from Clearfield Wednesday to do some extra shopping in Curwensville store.

Thursday evening the ladies missionary society of the Presbyterian church held a most interesting meeting. A Westminster Guild, an auxiliary, was organized for the younger boys and girls connected with the church. Three Clearfield ladies came up and rendered assistance in forming this new order. Miss Fulford, Miss Pierce and Mrs. Brown. Before the evening closed over one hundred persons partook of refreshments. This new branch in church affairs starts out without a handicap and ought to grow in numbers as well as usefulness in the entire community.

Miss Elizabeth Irvin and her nurse who spent several weeks in Philadelphia have returned home. They were accompanied by Miss Eva Ballute, who was also visiting relatives in that city.

Miss Lois Vaughn, who is teaching school at Surveys, came home yesterday and will remain over Sabbath with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Vaughn, South Side.

Little Sarah King, who has been ill for some time, is convalescing.

Mr. and Mrs. James Edmiston are rejoicing over the advent of a new baby daughter which arrived at their Walnut street home on last Wednesday.

Curwensville people were astounded at the news brought to town yesterday morning that Gus Bilger, of Breeze township, had died suddenly at the Clearfield brick company's plant. He was about 20 minutes before seven o'clock. He entered the plant apparently the best of health and set down for a few minutes before starting to work. He was conversing with several fellow workmen when he suddenly drew back his head. The men ran to his assistance and carried him to the open, but he was dead before any medical aid could have possibly reached him. He was 48 years old on the 16th of last December; was a son of Calvin and Sarah J. Bilger. He was married to May Moore, who has five daughters survive him, together with father and mother and three brothers. Was a member of the Brethren church, Bethesda lodge 821 I. O. O. F. and the Order of Moose. His body was brought to the Dovecote undertaking room and prepared for burial, and was taken to his home during the afternoon. No day or hour, at this writing.

has been set for the funeral, but on whatever day it takes place, the interment will be made in the churchyard at Greenville.

William TenEyck, of St. James, Mo., Paul Drinnard, of Dayton, O., and Will Drinnard, of Pittsburgh left last evening to return to their respective homes.

A stretch of wide concrete walk has been put down in front of the building lately occupied by the Workman's store Filbert street.

Health officer Weaver tacked up a "bacteria card" yesterday on the name of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fullerton, North Pine street.

The many friends of Mr. M. A. Caldwell were pleased to see and know that he is now able to be out and come up town on a while for a few hours. He is still under his physician's order.

A number of Curwensville Rebels who motored to Clearfield Thursday evening and spent several pleasant hours visiting with members of a sister lodge, being unaware that more than half a hundred Yellow Dogs from their town were holding high carnival in a room at the Dime hotel, close to the sky line.

EASY TO DARKEN
YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so even. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

Formidable Weapon.

The bolo is the national weapon of the Philippines. The blade is about 12 inches in length by nearly 3 inches in width at its broadest dimension. It tapers from the middle towards the shaft as well as toward the point, making it strongly resemble the ancient short sword. It is not double edged, however, but tapers from a thick back to an extremely keen edge. The scabbard of the bolo is made of native wood with rough outlined designs carved upon it. The whole weapon is much more beautiful in outline and more formidable than the Cuban machete.

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys If Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach, sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body of urinous waste, get four ounces of Fajal Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the oil of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Fajal Salts is inexpensive; can not injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

NOTHING NEW ABOUT KNOW ON APRIL FIFTH

Just about the time we thought we were seeing something new in the weather line his morning Johnathon Ogden dropped into the office to tell us that in 1881 or just 38 years ago, on April 17th, we had just such a day as this. At that time the cold spell hung on for three weeks, not ending until May 11. No gardens were made until the middle of May.

SNOW PUTS TROUT FISHING OUT OF BUSINESS MONDAY

Again is it our duty to arise in our place and remark that indeed is this the winter of our discontent. Here we were with a can chock full of wriggling, angleworms, the fishing pole all shiny with new varnish and the knapsack packed with all you can get now, ready for a foray into the mountains in order that we might be able to slip quietly to the banks of our favorite trout stream early Monday morning and attempt to beguile form his hiding places the wary speckled beauty lucky enough to escape his natural enemies during the long continued drought and consequent low water of last summer and fall, when lo! and behold, upon arising this morning we find two inches of snow upon the ground with the snowflakes continuing to fall in sheets.

Woe is me and mine fisherman friends the countryside over. Hoping for at least a crumb of comfort we hasten to the telephone and inquire of our good friend Bearick at Kennedy Park Game Reserve, what of the weather out upon his mountain nearby where the streams head upon which we usually try our skill. Imagine our consternation, dismay, etc., when Bearick informs us that at the mountain top they had a total of four inches of snow at 10 o'clock this morning and from the way it was coming down in clouds he believed it would reach 10 inches on the level by noon.

Being shy a fish hound and not having a snow shovel we hereby renounce all thought of going fishing on opening day and will thus break a record of twenty years standing. Draw this pesky weather man and the weather he is making.

TWISTY MARITAL PROBLEM IS PUT UP TO JUDGE; WOMAN SAYS SHE MARRIED TWINS; SHE CANNOT TELL THEM APART

Innsbruck, Germany, April 14.—A plot in matrimony, which would rival the most risqué of French farces, was put before the magistrate here today for solution.

Wealthy Frau Marie Telder, aged twenty-four complained that she married one man and now has good reason to believe that she is living with his twin.

"I would like your Honor to determine whether I married one man or two, who are identical in appearance," she said. Frau Tilden explained that the civil and religious ceremonies

DECLARE GHOSTLY FORM FLITS THRU SHAWVILLE CHURCH

The little village of Shawville, located seven miles down the river from Clearfield, is in the throes of a real ghost scare. The ghost or "haunt" is said to frequent the Methodist church building, several school girls who sometimes visited the church during recess period and at the noon hour claiming to have seen an "honest to goodness" ghost on several occasions. According to these girls the ghost or spectre, which takes the form of a woman, has been seen to rise from behind the pulpit and apparently float through the air about the church. Their story of the ghost has caused quite a commotion in the neighborhood and several of the bravest young men of the village have visited the church on several occasions for the purpose of laying for the ghost, but thus far their efforts have proved unavailing as the unearthly visitor failed to appear to them.

MAJOR LYNN ADAMS, SUPERINTENDENT OF STATE POLICE, TELLS COMMONS OF WORK OF "PENNSYLVANIA'S FINEST"

Two Fisted Head of Pennsylvania State Police Makes Fine Impression On Hundred Men Assembled; Devoted to Ridding State of Liquor

POINTS TO THE DUTY OF THE CITIZENS

Major Adams, head of "Pennsylvania's Finest," the State Constabulary, experiences in dealing with liquor law violations and urged the men of the Common Club of Trinity Methodist church, which meeting was held in the Sunday school room of the church. Members of the club and their guests to the number of one hundred men were present to hear the distinguished speaker and all were not only pleased with his talk but came away filled with the idea that the right man is at the head of this justly famous organization, and, thanks to Major Adams' detailing of the character, training and make up of the men under his command, possessed a better knowledge and appreciation of the state police organization and membership as a whole.

President Sam L. Warner presided over the meeting in his usual inimitable style and kept things on the move all the while. After the introduction of guests President Warner announced a pair of out-of-the-ordinary guests in the persons of Messrs. Gallagher and Shean, who are known to fame because of a recent court hearing in which the stamp of just ordinary "ham actors" was placed upon them legally and officially by the judge who had them perform in his court room. However the local pair were Harder and Stauffer than the originals and they made a real and prolonged hit with their really clever "pokes" at the more important persons there assembled. Gallagher and Shean were a real treat.

Alex Black, a visitor to the club, whusled "Annie Laurie" and another wee Scotch ballad we didn't ken the name of in the manner which has earned for him the title of the "Scotch Canary Bird" of the Fourth Ward.

At this point President Warner stated that inasmuch as Major Adams would be required to drive across the mountain to Tyrone to catch a train for Harrisburg, he proposed to have him address the meeting and thereupon introduced the distinguished speaker.

Major Adams is a forceful, convincing speaker and opened his remarks by saying he knew his audience was expecting to hear a "dry speech," and he didn't propose to disappoint them. He then referred to Friday, 13th, and said 13 was his hoodoo. He noticed the American flag adorning the room, had thirteen stripes in it, and he didn't like that. He also noticed there were more red than white stripes in that flag and he not only didn't like that but proposed to tear one out, asking his audience if they would join him in doing that. Upon receiving no response to his request for help Major Adams said he presented the matter in this way because that was the way with the bootlegger and the wets generally, they wanted to tear the 18th Amendment out of the Constitution—but they would never get it.

Major Adams was given a great hand at the close of his remarks, the assemblage giving him a ringing vote of appreciation.

The meeting closed with the illustrated lecture on clay and clay products by Mr. Hubbard. The dinner was served by the ladies of the church and was in thorough keeping with the fine character of the meeting throughout.

DEER BREAKS NECK ATTEMPTING TO HURDLE STATE NURSERY FENCE

A little buck deer went foraging in Billy Daguer's state nursery out near Kennedy Park Game Reserve one day last week and failing to remember where he got through the fence attempted to jump over the high wire fence surrounding the nursery. He failed to scale the fence but did succeed in breaking his neck.

Game Keeper Bearick was called to look after the dead buck, which weighed about 75 pounds. He charged Billy with running his Ford into the deer on the road and then tossing the victim over into the nursery, but Billy was able to prove an alibi by the tracks in the soil inside the fence.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. G.

Those of us of Democratic leanings, and we are becoming plentier in the land daily, appear to want to be overdoing it a little in charging every price raise on the necessities of life to the tariff. The tariff may have something to do with it, but the little old middleman and money-hungry retailer must not be allowed to walk a tireless out of the picture.

A financial writer in defending the tariff from a price inflation charge says: If the tariff is to blame for the heat in prices on "protected" articles, then the articles on the free list, unaffected by the tariff, ought to show no increase in prices, or, in any event, only moderate increases.

This recent depression touched bottom at the end of 1921. The general level of prices in December 1921 was 147. That level had risen to 168 on Jan. 1, 1922. Thus the average increase in commodity prices was exactly 20 per cent.

Raw silk is on the free list. From December, 1921, to the first week in April, raw silk increased from $7.56 per pound to $9.15 per pound, an increase of 21.6 per cent.

Rubber is on the free list. In the period a question it increased from 24 cents to 30.25 cents per pound, an increase of 26 per cent.

Ten is on the free list. In this year and a quarter, it rose from 29 cents to 45 cents per pound, an increase of 55.2 per cent.

Coffee is on the free list. It increased in price from 9.15 cents to 11.25 cents per pound, an increase of 23 per cent.

Copper is on the free list. It rose from 6.53 to 17.125 cents per cent.

Turpentine is on the free list. It rose from 80c to $1.49 per gallon, an increase on 100 per cent.

Tin is on the free list. Its price increased from $2.41 to 51c per pound, a rise of 77.3 per cent.

Brick is on the free list. It sold for 18.5c per pound in December, 1921, and it sold for 30c per pound in the first week of April. The rise was 63 per cent.

In other words, average prices have risen less rapidly than the price of each of these commodities, which are among the most important on the duty-free list. Therefore, it is very untrue to say that "there has been no advance in prices which could not be ascribed to the highest protective tariff this country has ever imposed."

The people of the United States have been patient and long-suffering in dealing with the beverage liquor traffic. They have tried every kind of regulation, taxation, restriction, local option, and the other known methods of dealing with the well-regulated evil. The history of the adoption of national prohibition is one of the finest illustrations of the ability of a self-governing people of methods of control over action and conduct.

The Colonies from the earliest times tried in vain to solve the problem. From 1612, when the Colony of Massachusetts, after declaring that many are "disquipping themselves with drink," ordered that the governor's permit be necessary to sell liquor, for over a century there were few years in which laws and ordinances were not passed, tried for a time, and repealed that others might be passed, in the attempt to control that which never has been controllable—the liquor traffic. In 1654 the preamble of one of these early liquor laws sets forth that "notwithstanding the great care this court hath had and the laws made to suppress that swinish sin of drunkenness, yet persons addicted to the vice find out ways to deceive the law." Various forms of the license system were tried, but none curbed the growing evil.

The Whiskey Rebellion
The Revolutionary War brought forth an edict much like the order forbidding the sale of intoxicants to men in uniform during the recent World War. In Cambridge General Washington issued orders to the officers of the Continental Army to prevent so far as possible American soldiers from frequenting tippling houses. The Continental Congress on September 20, 1776, prohibited the sale of all kinds of liquors to soldiers by sutlers. Even then liquor was formally and officially recognized as an enemy to the Republic and its use a treason to the State.

Taxes and imposts upon distilled liquors, proposed by Hamilton, were adopted by Congress in 1791, the anticipated revenue being estimated by Hamilton at $826,000 annually. Amendment of this act to impose the tax upon distilleries resulted in the whiskey rebellion of 1793, when 13,000 soldiers had to be called out and $1,500,000—a sum larger than the three years' receipts from the liquor taxes—expended by the new Nation to curb the first open and avowed attempt to substitute the rule of advocates of personal liberty and liquor for the rule of the majority.

The fact that the action of State of Pennsylvania in calling question the authority of the Federal Government to thus control the liquor traffic encouraged the leaders of the insurrection is suggestive today when new rebellions against the Constitution are being advocated by men who for appetite or profit would demolish orderly government.

You Pay Three Costs
in the Purchase of Any
—Range—

Most folks when they come into a new range, after finding out for themselves why it is superior, find it hard to pay the price and determine in their own mind that it is a good investment. May we remind you in the purchase of any range, you must pay three costs:

1. Cost of the range.
2. Cost of fuel consumed during the life of its usefulness.
3. Cost of repairs.

OTHELLO and ROUND OAK
IRON-BUILT RANGES

Because of exclusive advantages, the OTHELLO and ROUND OAK, when these three costs are added for a period of as short as 10 or 12 years actually cost less than a cheap or medium priced range which cannot possibly render the same service or assure the same degree of satisfaction in its possession.

The reason why is that the saving in fuel and the absence of repairs in time actually pays for the Range.

May we ask a very serious question? If you must pay the three costs anyway, why not select the one whose final cost is least, particularly when the satisfaction and pride of possession throughout the years of its usefulness is worth more to you than the money. Let us demonstrate each and every one of these desirable features.

Political Paragraphs
ODELL HAUSER'S COLUMN

Little matter of taxation produced the excitement that had been seen at the time of the last session. The assembly started to talk Monday and the House closed Tuesday with a whoop and a cheer. The subject was not yet decided. How can I say to our friends, "you see," and of all the words in the world, the word "see" is the most reliable of the follower of the amateur or professional. To the amateur, it is still up with the professional.

In the present instance, it is not a difficult job to keep up with the professional, for they are not saying very many things. There was only one development in a week that amounts to very much. It was a statement of the speaker by Governor Pinchot that apparently has been accepted by all as final.

The first and most important thing that the Governor said was that he was not going to touch the tax on the sugar. He said that he was not going to touch the tax on the sugar. He said that he was not going to touch the tax on the sugar.

There is the moral of the week. The assembly now understands it. It has to handle the taxation problem without any help from the Governor. There are signs that it did understand that, and acted accordingly. The first reaction was to start round in circles, emitting an heartrending cry of distress. The week was practically devoted to that.

The reason thereof is that not only the House not know what to tax, it is not sure it knows how much it needs to raise. A dog may be in a success chasing his own tail, but if he has reason to doubt, he will be of his caudal appendage. The problem is decidedly complicated. Add to it is with the Assembly. Far from being its only problem, the question of how much money must be raised, which must be settled first.

Chairman Harer of the appropriations committee and certain of his members have nuzzled their flug to the point of the action that something must be done for the next two years.

That the administration says to Governor Pinchot and Dr. Harer that they can get the good ship of wealth over her two year voyage by feeding only some $90,000, is a violation of all precedent.

Nothing is ever supposed to happen at Thursday meetings of the House. The few members there are supposed to sleep peacefully and in their slumber advance bills on the calendar so as to be ready for next week.

There sent two Ludlow of Montgomery county is the man who should be added to the list of notables in particular, he got up and said he wanted to speak on a question of personal privilege. Getting the floor, he proceeded to lay out and embellish the ways and means committee for not having presented to the legislative body an orderly and logical plan of taxation.

This was the signal to throw out the life line. Everybody who had anything to say on the subject immediately began to try to say it. And before they were through, considerable had been said.

Just how one is to divide the various schools of thought, present proposition is somewhat at a loss to say. But there are several schools of thought and so we might as well take this opportunity to do what we can toward elucidating them, a for our own minds. And we needn't be afraid of what we say, either, because there is always one consolation in this matter: no one knows any more about it than anyone else.

Starting with Representative Ludlow himself, I should say that he represented the administration school of thought. He denied, when taxed with it, that he was by arrangement speaking the mind of the Governor, and that was probably literally true. Nevertheless, what he said was in the main what constituted the administration's viewpoint, namely, "why doesn't the House get busy and do something about this without bothering us?"

The peculiar part of that, however, is that in what he said Mr. Ludlow was virtually attacking Representative Woner, chairman of the ways and means committee. And Mr. Woner has been recognized all along as a strong supporter of the administration. So it is apparent there is just a bit of confusion in the administration school of thought.

When Mr. Ogle arose to remark called for the manufacturers to submit to being taxed. He represents that by no means inconsiderable portion of the House which believes the need for new revenue should be met by repealing the exemption the manufacturing corporations enjoy from a tax on their capital stock valuation.

Early in this session I could—and in fact did—believe thoroughly that there was no way of escaping levying increased taxes in this session and that the whole trend of things was to make it a manufacturers' tax. But that viewpoint was based on the political situation that existed at that time.

As the readers of these paragraphs know by exclusive information brought out two weeks ago, a change has come over the spirit of the dream. The Grundy interests and their time foes of the Crow-Sprot-Baker have begun to get together. That considerably alters the prospects for the manufacturers' tax. I now look as though the project advocated by Mr. Ogle the other day in the House would have difficulty in materializing. In fact, my own inclination at this time is to believe there is only one thing likely to enact the manufacturers tax and that is the possibility that the Governor might advocate it, which possibility is not over light just now.

Still another viewpoint was that expressed by Representative Alexander, the doughty little man from Media. Alexander broke with the Governor on the dry bill and is pretty well "off" Mr. Pinchot at the moment. He constituted himself on Thursday as spokesman for the group which more or less openly criticizes Mr. Pinchot for his course in the taxation matter. This group chides His Excellency for "passing the buck" to the legislative body on taxation. It maintains Mr. Pinchot should have taken the leadership in working out the revenue question, and that his failure to do so has put that body in a false and disagreeable position, from which it is entitled to exonerate itself without consulting the Governor's interests. This group is rather intent on making trouble.

And there you have it. Next week ought to be interesting at Harrisburg. It will represent the working out of the conflict between these views. Beginning with Monday next, we shall see what the Assembly does after having finished with the pastime of running around in circles.

Wealth in the Mind.
It is the mind that makes us rich and happy, in what condition we are and money signifies no more to it than it does to the gods—Seneca.

Australia's Plague of Rabbits.
It is estimated that there are now in Australia 30,000,000 rabbits all descended from a few pairs of cottontails brought from America about seventy years ago.

The Potato's Joy Ride to Market

Price received by producer $1.00
Local buyer's profit .05
Shipping to nearby wholesaler .05
Wholesaler's expense (misc) .07
Total cost to shipper $1.17
Average shipper's profit .10
Freight, Wisconsin to Cleveland .10
Cleveland broker's commission .05
Total cost to wholesaler at terminal $1.42
Wholesaler's expense and profit .18
Total cost to retailer $1.60
Retailer's expense and profit .20
Total cost to Cleveland consumer $1.80

By the points farther east, the consumer cost is easily $3.00. The discrepancy is even worse on the 1922 crop, as the sacks, barrels and cost of handling are worth more than the potatoes on the farm but the proportion of spread between producer and consumer is the same or greater.

When some of these potatoes are served on dining cars or in first-class hotels, they have forgotten all about their humble beginning and the price per bushel depends on the size of the potatoes. A 50-pound potato, which costs $1 a bushel would cost the farmer 1.23 cents. If served at the moderate price of 25 cents, the spread is about 1427 per cent.

The consumer pays for bottled spring water, 25 cents a bottle at retail. The water itself costs practically nothing.

Thinking this in mind, what steps can be eliminated from the potato's journey?

LESSON FOR APRIL 15

JOSEPH, THE PRESERVER OF HIS PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 45:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Honor thy father
and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord
thy God giveth thee.—Exodus 20:12.
REFERENCE MATERIAL.—Joshua
24:22. Psalm 105:14-23; Hebrews 11:31-32.

PRIOR TOPIC—Joseph Forgiving
Brothers.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Joseph, the Forgiving
Brother.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Joseph as Son and Brother.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Inspiring Example of Joseph.

While the climax of the story is reached in Joseph's revelation to his brethren, yet his life should be briefly sketched in order to get the full force of this climax.

I. Loved by His Father; Hated by His Brethren (Genesis 37). The betrayal of the father's partiality increased his brethren's hatred for him. His dreams were prophecies of God's dealing with them.

II. Sold into Slavery (Genesis 37). So intensely did they hate him that they proposed to kill him. This murderous purpose was turned aside by the proposition to sell him into slavery. They sold him to merchantmen who were going down into Egypt and in turn they sold him as a slave.

III. Cast into Prison (Genesis 39). While serving as a slave he was falsely accused and sent to prison. Joseph's character had so impressed Potiphar that he doubted his wife's charges against him. If he had believed her he would have put this Hebrew slave to death.

IV. Made Prime Minister (Genesis 41). Though falsely accused and imprisoned the hand of the Lord was upon him that he was soon exalted to the throne of Pharaoh.

V. His Dealing With His Brethren (Genesis 42-44). He dealt barly with them, desiring to test their characters before revealing himself to them.

VI. Joseph Reveals Himself to His Brethren (Genesis 45:1-15).

1. Alone With His Brethren (vv. 1-2). When his pent-up emotions could no longer be restrained he ordered all the men to withdraw. Here alone with his brethren he made himself known to them. There are some emotions too sacred to disclose in the presence of unsympathetic men.

2. Conscience Smitten Brethren (v. 3). When Joseph disclosed his identity they stood condemned in his presence. They were smitten with a guilty conscience. A score of years before they had put him into a pit to die, but later lifted him out and sold him into slavery. Now they are before him with reversed positions. They are at his mercy. Some day every man shall face his sin unless they be canceled in the blood of Jesus.

3. Divine Providence Interpreted (vv. 4-5). (1) His gracious invitation (v. 4). "Come near, I am your brother." How like the Savior. He is saying unto sinners who have wronged him, "Come near, I am your brother." (2) "He no grieved" (v. 5). He sought by these words to allay the distress in which his brethren were. Jesus is saying the same kind words to repentant sinners today. (3) "God sent me to preserve life" (v. 5-8). God turned the wicked thoughts of these brethren to good. God is today making the wrath of man to praise him. All that Satan can do but furthers God's purposes. The very wicked thoughts of these brethren in attempting to destroy Joseph were turned to the preservation of their lives.

4. Joseph's Message to His Father (vv. 9-15). (1) "God hath made me Lord of Egypt" (v. 9). He made them hasten to his father with the assurance that God had elevated him to a place of lordship in Egypt. (2) Urgent invitation (vv. 9-10). His father is invited to come, bringing his children, grandchildren and flocks. This must have been a great and joyful surprise to Jacob, when famine and death were plaguing him. (3) Promise of nourishment during famine (v. 11). Joseph did not allow his prosperity to make him selfish. His character stood the test of prosperity. (4) Tell father of all my glory in Egypt (v. 12). This was not boasting but an effort to convince his father of his ability to care for him.

5. Joseph's Forgiving Love (vv. 14-15). Joseph weeping upon the neck of his brethren is a most touching scene. There was entire forgiveness; there was full reconciliation. This transcendent scene causes Joseph's character to shine forth in its true glory.

As If It Were Plato.
Great is he who enjoys his earthly life as if it were Plato, and not less great is the man to whom all his life is no more than a preparation.—Seneca

Consider Others.
The excessive pleasure we feel in talking of ourselves, ought to make us apprehensive that we afford little to our hearers.—Rochefoucauld.

The All-Servicing Spirit.
The spirit of God is not imprisoned in the Bible nor limited to it.

THE ODD ONE OF THE FAMILY!

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR

ANNOUNCEMENT

of Interest to

MILLIONS of FAMILIES

"I will build a car for the multitude"

Said Henry Ford in 1903—Read how the fulfillment of that prophecy is now made possible through the

Ford Weekly Purchase Plan

For many years it has been Henry Ford's personal ambition to make the Ford the universal family car—to put it within the reach of the millions of people who have never been privileged to enjoy the benefits of motor car owners.

During the past fifteen years over 7,500,000 Ford cars have been placed in the hands of retail customers—more than a million and a half of them within the past twelve months—and yet there are still millions of families who are hopefully looking forward to the day when they can own a Ford. And now the way is open.

Under the terms of this plan you can select your Ford Car, set aside a small amount each week and you will be surprised how soon you will own it. In the meantime your money will be safely deposited to your credit in one of the local banks where it will draw interest.

Think it over. Five dollars will start an account. The whole family can participate in it—father, mother, brothers and sisters each doing a little.

Why not start today. Stop in and talk it over with your local Ford dealer. He will be glad to fully explain the details of the plan and help you get started toward the ownership of a Ford car.

Announcing Our Co-Operation in the New Ford Weekly Purchase Plan

Following out our policy of extending the facilities of this bank in whatever way we can to serve the public, we have arranged to give our co-operation to the new Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.

We realize what the automobile means to the average family in bringing them greater enjoyment of life, and believe our action in helping those who desire to become Ford owners will be appreciated by many families who can now realize that ambition through the new Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.

Under this plan, you can begin with an initial deposit as low as $5.00. Then select the type of Ford you want—Touring Car, Runabout, Coupe, Sedan, etc.—and arrange to make weekly deposits on which interest will be computed at our regular savings rate.

Come in and let us explain the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan to you, or, if you wish, go to the nearest Ford Dealer for further details.

Start today, and before you realize it you will be driving your own car.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Verdita begins between Michael and Sayers, noted criminal.

SIR NORMAN GREYER once of Scotland Yard, when Sayers' beautiful housemaid JANET saved him from a life sentence in prison. Sir Norman falls in love with Janet and marries her. Michael, a lord's henchman, and his daughter Beatrice, when their auto runs wild Beatrice and Sayers are in love.

Michael and his band of robbers break into Kintore's Court and rob the guests. Justice is done by Sayers to keep her jewelry and later he personally returns Janet's jewelry to her and arranges to publish a fake obituary. Greyer discovers Michael's hiding place and a game of cat and mouse is played with Michael as the stake.

NOW GO ON WITH STORY
Janet Continues:

So the match started. The first hole was halved in four, and from then onward commenced a struggle which I can hardly think of, even now, without a shiver of exultation. Neither was over more than two up; but toward the sixteenth hole, I began to realize that another factor besides skill was at work. Norman topped his second shot but jumped the bunker and lay upon the green. Michael carried a mauling shot, but plucked upon a moving machine and came back to an almost unplayable place in the long grass. He lost the hole. Norman, who was as nearly nervous as I have ever seen him, muttered something about bad luck, but his adversary only shrugged his shoulders.

At the seventeenth hole Norman drove fairly well but was still sixty yards short of the green. It was the old Michael who took his stand afterward on the tee, hard and dogged. I saw his teeth gleam for a moment, and the whitening of the flesh around his knuckles as he gripped his club fiercely. He hit the most wonderful drive I have ever seen, long and low and straight, it carried on and on, while we watched it breathlessly. Finally it ran onto the green and ended within a couple of club-lengths of the hole. I gave a little gasp of relief, for from the first I had prayed that my husband might lose.

But I had reckoned without that unseen force, Norman topped his mauling shot, which bumped along the ground onto the green, passed Michael's ball, and to my horror, dropped into the hole. Even Norman himself seemed to have no words. He stood looking at the spot where his ball had disappeared, his face averted from his opponent.

Michael made no remark. He studied his putt long and carefully, hit it with a musical little click, and we all watched it run straight for the hole. At the last moment some trifling irregularity of surface seemed to deflect it; it caught the corner of the hole, swung round inside and came out again. It rested on the very edge, and we stood there waiting. Nothing, however, happened. Michael turned away, and I realized that I saw a little quiver upon his lips.

At the eighteenth, a strong wind was against them. Norman, pulling a little, escaped the bunkers; but Michael, hitting a far better ball, carried them with a few yards to spare. Norman played a fine second and reached the green four or five yards from the hole. When Michael reached his ball, I saw him stop and look at it. His servant gave an exclamation. It was lying where a huge clod of earth had been knocked away by some beginner and never replaced, without a blade of grass around it and on a downward slope. I looked across toward my husband.

"It isn't fair," I whispered hoarsely. "Move it with your foot. Norman can't see. Besides, I'm in the way."

Michael, who was choosing a club, just glanced up at me for a moment, and I felt as though I had said something sacrilegious.

"We don't play games that way," he rejoined quietly. "I am afraid this is going to be rather a forlorn hope, though."

He took a niblick, and against the wind he was only able to get about halfway to the green. This time, however, his ball was lying well.

"I play the odd," he murmured as he selected a running-up aloof. We waited breathlessly for the shot.

Norman's caddy and Michael's servant, although they had no idea of the course, of the significance of the air that it was of no ordinary interest. We all watched Michael's ball, when at last he played it, spin straight for the flag, and I could scarcely keep back a little cry of joy.

Norman made his way, without remark, to the clubhouse. He had spoken to me looked toward Michael again. Mer was strange being. This was the passing of the feud which left them both forever.

I SPARE) Michael the question which I knew was upon his lips. "She is still unmarried," I told him. "I am sorry to hear that she is unmarried," he said, "although no man in the world could be worthy of her. I am going to instruct you with a mission. If ever the truth concerning me should come to light, I want her to know this."

He drew from his pocket a letter-case of black silk, with platinum clasps, simple but very elegant, a trifle for a man. Out of it he drew what appeared to be his own copy, a crumpled card, upon which was written, in Beatrice's handwriting, her own name. The card was smeared as though with the stain of crushed flowers.

"I planned my death," he continued with a faint return to his old cynicism. "Very much as I have lived my life—with my tongue in my cheek. Then I read in some French paper that Beatrice had sent flowers to the hospital for my funeral, and I felt all the bitter shame of a man who has done an ugly thing. I made what statement I could. And here I am, in almost feebler health, with that card and one of the flowers from the grave. If ever she should learn the truth," he added, his face turned away toward the mountains, "I should like her to know that she may reckon it as atonement."

I laid my hand upon his arm. Speech of any sort seemed to have become extraordinarily difficult.

THE last we saw of Michael was in the way, allegorical. As we climbed out of the grassy slope of the golf-club on the following morning, we saw two men on the other side of the river, walking steadily away from us along the path which led across the lower chain of hills toward the mountains. They carried knapsacks on their backs and long staves in their hands. They had somehow, at that distance, the air of pilgrims.

"There goes Benlodge, off on one of his mountain expeditions," the secretary, who was playing with Norman, remarked, pointing them out. "They say that he has made up his mind to climb that further peak beyond the pass. Even the Basque guides call him foolhardy."

I was at the two figures. I was my hand a futile farewell. But Michael never once turned back.

THE END.

NORMAN took out his putter, and I scarcely dared to watch. He was only a few inches from the hole. The result seemed certain.

"This for the match," he said, looking across at his opponent.

"For the match," Michael repeated hopelessly.

Norman struck the ball with a little stab—and I could scarcely believe my eyes. It missed the hole, passing it on the left-hand side and coming to a standstill at least two feet away. Norman looked down at Curwensville people were astounded at the news brought to town yesterday morning that Gus Bilger, of Breeze township, had died suddenly at the Clearfield brick company's plant. He was about 20 minutes before seven o'clock. He entered the plant apparently the best of health and set down for a few minutes before starting to work. He was conversing with several fellow workmen when he suddenly drew back his head. The men ran to his assistance and carried him to the open, but he was dead before any medical aid could have possibly reached him. He was 48 years old on the 16th of last December; was a son of Calvin and Sarah J. Bilger. He was married to May Moore, who has five daughters survive him, together with father and mother and three brothers. Was a member of the Brethren church, Bethesda lodge 821 I. O. O. F. and the Order of Moose. His body was brought to the Dovecote undertaking room and prepared for burial, and was taken to his home during the afternoon. No day or hour, at this writing.

EASY TO DARKEN
YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so even. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

Formidable Weapon.

The bolo is the national weapon of the Philippines. The blade is about 12 inches in length by nearly 3 inches in width at its broadest dimension. It tapers from the middle towards the shaft as well as toward the point, making it strongly resemble the ancient short sword. It is not double edged, however, but tapers from a thick back to an extremely keen edge. The scabbard of the bolo is made of native wood with rough outlined designs carved upon it. The whole weapon is much more beautiful in outline and more formidable than the Cuban machete.

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys If Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach, sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body of poisonous waste, get four ounces of Fajal Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the oil of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Fajal Salts is inexpensive; can not injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Certainly "mare" in this case has nothing to do with the horse. It is a corruption of "maras," a malevolent demon who according to tradition, possessed a nest filled with wonderful jewels and gold.

It originated in the days when linen was first worn, and the man who could sport a linen shirt was considered something of a "swell." He had the opening cut in his waistcoat so that all could see his elegance.
